At Aieahau.

The Right Rev. the Bishop of Honolulu held service over the body of the late Princess Kaiulani at Aieahau this morning. Only the father and intimate friends of the deceased were present during the offering of prayers by the Reverend Bishop.

After dark this evening, the remains of the young chiefs will be carried quietly to the old stone church, where they will lie in state to-morrow from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. A guard of honor from Co. G, the Hawaiian company of the N. G. H., will be in attendance. Major Potter has been very busy in arranging the funeral ceremonies and has at all times given way to the wishes of Mr. Cleghorn. On the day of the funeral the major will be assisted by Major Iaukea, Capt. Pratt and Capt. Wilder.

The hearse will be drawn to the mausoleum by members of the different Hawaiian patriotic leagues, but the girls from the seminaries will not take a place in the procession.

Mr. Cleghorn has selected the pall bearers from the personal friends of the late princess and of his own. The Hawaiians have faithfully paid their respects to their beloved ally by weeping at her bier day and night during the sad week of mourning at Aieahau.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Lunalilo's Remains.

ED. THE INDEPENDENT:—

The Advertiser states this morning that "the remains of Lunalilo and Kanaina have been removed from Kawaiahao to the Royal Mausoleum." Can you tell me when it happened, and by whose authority. I always understood that Lunalilo selected his burial place outside the Royal Mausoleum, because he was a King of the people not a ruler by divine rights.

A FRIEND OF "BILL."

[We cannot tell you, whether King Bill's bones have been scattered among the other remains of the Kamehamehas, since Mr. Dole became the ruler of Hawaii nei. The Lunalilo tomb is still preserved, and the grounds surrounding it kept clean. The vault may be empty and Lunalilo's dust removed. Our present "King" Bill O. S. is probably the only man who can answer our correspondent. He has the key to the Lunalilo tomb and treasury.—Ed.]
